Chris Peterson is a Salt Lake City-based artist working to empower the next generation of grassroots leaders by nurturing wonder and imagination in children as a long-term approach to sustainable community development. While he spends much of his time engaged in facilitating a handful of community arts projects locally, he is also experimenting with arts-based methods for creative leadership cultivation in rural and impoverished communities internationally.

Rebekah Sosa uses mixed media as a tool to raise awareness about global issues and encourage people to get involved in sustainable solutions. Her work is focused on the interrelationships between people across cultures. The work is also wrestling with concepts of globalization, environmental degradation, and local activism. The photographs on display were taken in Xalibe Guatemala and Mulunguni Kenya.
